

Uruguay s new solar panels

Overview

At the forefront of this expansion is a new photovoltaic project in the Salto department, set to produce 200 GWh annually. Uruguay is reinforcing its status as a global renewable energy powerhouse by expanding its solar capacity to meet rising electricity demand. Already boasting a grid where over 98% of its electricity is generated from clean sources, the nation is not resting on its laurels. Physicist Ramón Méndez Galain, who led this transformation.
